

2007 Under-15s Preview

By Russell Eggar

With young players getting older and better, the Mytholmroyd Under-15s will be looking for an influx of committed cricketers ready to learn, adapt and grow into a good standard of cricket. The coaches will be looking for new players to fit in around a backbone of young talent already at the club.

All-rounder Jack Earle will be captaining a young side that is looking to rebuild over the next two years and chase for honours. Jack is a player to watch in the future and will undoubtedly be the nucleus of the side. Alongside him will be a bowling attack led by Ben Burnside and Sam Taylor - who can cause the opposition a lot of problems if they reach the levels they are capable of. Edward Sutcliffe is also a talented all-rounder who can achieve good things in coming seasons with the bat and his improving spin bowling.

The aim for 2007 is to get the Under-15s playing together so that they can create a common understanding. The team will be focusing on reaching a high standard of cricket that they know they are more than capable of. If they can do this, then the mix of new and old players has the potential to achieve success.
