Geoff Manger on club people

Sue Broadbent has been a key person at the club. She's done teas here for a long time. Her son and husband have both played cricket here.

Other significant club people have been Paul Reynolds, Bernard Hagues and Ian Calvert, but it's always been a good team effort.

Howard Cooper and Paul Jackson were two Old Crocs cricketers who went on to play rugby union for Yorkshire.

Frank Robinson was also an interesting character. He was here a long time. He was an ex-Bradford League player and a very good bowler.

He was one of the Bevin Boys – one of the young men who worked down the mines during the Second World War instead of serving in the armed forces, as coal mining was deemed a vital occupation. He also served as Lord Mayor of Leeds and still comes down to watch the rugby here.
