

CALDERDALE AND KIRKLEES CRICKET HERITAGE

This project is now well underway and exhibitions featuring a timeline of important milestones, short narrative sections and photographs have already been put on display in suitable local venues for some of the clubs. A full list of dates can be seen in the leaflet on the club noticeboard. The exhibition for Thurstonland will be opened on Thursday July 21st (7.00 pm) at the Rose and Crown.

It will be on show until October 31st when material will then be given to the club. Lee Booth is closely involved with the project in running the website (www.ckcricketheritage.org.uk) associated with the research. A wealth of material including photographs and line drawings of grounds can be viewed and orders made for notelets based on the art work. The project is ongoing and details are always being updated.

An exhibition entitled 180 Not Out: The Development of Cricket in Kirklees will be open to the public at the Tolson Museum after May 13th. It should be well worth a visit.
