180 Not Out: The Development of Cricket in Kirklees

Witnessed to a new special exhibition!

In 1881 a local club found the site comprising the land in the garden of residence. The ownership of the site was transferred to the club in 1911.

The club has since been a leading force in the development of cricket in Kirklees.

- Open to all ages and abilities
- A friendly, relaxed atmosphere
- A well-kept and well-maintained ground
- A friendly and helpful staff

Supporting Teams

The club has a long history of supporting teams in the area. These include:

Home Sweet Home

A local club which has been active for over 100 years, offering a friendly atmosphere with facilities of quality and a well-kept and well-maintained ground.

Playing Internationally

International cricket has been a part of the club's history for many years. The club has produced many players who have represented their countries at the international level.

Many cricket clubs have benefited from the generosity of wealthy or kind-hearted local figures. Landowners have donated land to play on, (or rented it out for a nominal fee). Some benefactors saw it as their duty to support the local community. Others developed a long association with clubs, with family members being given honorary roles such as that of president.

Start of Play

At the start of the 19th century, it was a common sight to see a group of men in the streets of London, some with a cricket bat and ball, others with a cricket ball and bat, and some with a cricket ball and bat. They were playing cricket in the streets, and this was the start of the game.

By the 18th century, cricket had become a popular game in the streets of London. It was a game of skill and strategy, and it was played by men of all social classes. The game was played on a small, rectangular field, and it was played with a ball and a bat.

Merchants & Landlords

England were also keen to support leisure activities that improved the health and morale of the workforce. The 18th and 19th centuries were marked by many recessions and financial problems. Amusement for events held in public houses, such as 'St Monday' damaged the club was a welcome element was also involved, if business and the players. It also may be offered to good years who were then required to turn out for the team.
